

ABSTRACT

A system whereby vendors of computer systems may advantageously utilize the processing capability of the computers in these systems after the systems have been sold. The system provides computer services via a network of computers which have been sold with an agreement from the buyers thereof to permit the seller to conditionally utilize the computers subsequent to the sale thereof.